Charity Island lighthouse October 1939

Happy Holidays Everyone !

When I shot out that last newsletter Karen and I were headed to Montreal for a Tour Bus Convention.

What a beautiful City. We saw some great sights and had a couple of really great meals there, an especially memorable one at a wonderful little Italian restaurant called Quattros in the center of Downtown Montreal.

Now for a couple of "big news items" from Charity Island from this past season.

We have a new Bald Eagle nest just 400 feet from the boat basin that we actually noticed for the first time in April of this year. That makes three active nests on a 300 acre Island!

LIVE WEB CAM COMING TO CHARITY ISLAND

My wife and I are blessed with two beautiful and talented children. My 28 year old son is one of those computer whiz kids. He has been able to get us reliable high speed wireless internet access at the lightkeepers house and we will be able to post a live webcam on the porch of the lighthouse this coming season.

We got as far as delivering the necessary hardware to the island in late October but were not able to get the receiver tower assembled before the season ended.

It will all be up and running by May 1st though. When it is, you will be able to log onto Charity Island.net to view the lake conditions first hand.

Talk about catching the right lighting.

One of the best pictures ever taken of our

Luckiest Bride of 2010

Her Big Gamble Pays Off!

We got a call from a lady in March of 2010 who wanted to get married on Charity Island but she wanted to get married on the 10th day of the 10th Month of 2010.

Yikes! A October Wedding!

After the cold, wet, and windy of summer of 2009 we felt the chances of having to cancel an October wedding was very high.

All summer long the Captain, my wife and I would have this conversation about what will we do about that wedding in October if the weather goes bad.

All that worrying for nothing. Perhaps I should say that "all that praying paid off!"

Talk about a Blue Bird Day and a Picture Perfect wedding! It was such a great day And they are truly a great couple.

Congratulations to Karen and Dave Williams!!
